

Instructions: For open-source access to underlying case law, click directly on the figure.
 (To open the link in a separate tab, right-click on the symbol and select "open in new tab.")

This Figure represents the argument made in Part III of the article.

Figure 2 shows existing federal authority warranting recognition of the affordable-bail right. Once again, circles represent cases and arrows pointing back from circles represent citations. The Griffin line of Supreme Court cases are colored magenta. While magenta cases do not directly concern bail, they prohibit incarceration of indigents solely because of their poverty and affirm the equal-justice principle. Green cases explicitly embrace affordable bail. The single blue case is neutral on the affordability question but completes the doctrinal picture. Our focus is on the green cases, the line proceeding from Stack and Bandy II.